The Etiquette of Illness -- 3 Rules As parents, we've all been in the situation when someone brings their obviously sick child to a play date or to school. These overly laid back or inconsiderate parents saunter in with a toddler whose nose is profusely running and a barky cough with little or no explanation. You are often left to panic or seethe.

If you absolutely cannot call in sick, there are a few things to keep in mind: Keep your hands clean by washing them often. Use sanitizer or disinfectant wipes after coughing, sneezing, or even just touching your nose. If you feel you might be coming down with something, expand your personal space boundary.
