The House of Susan
Lulham ( 2014) is a crime / ghost story novella by British author Phil Rickman,
what he describes as the
"12 and a half" entry in his Merrily Watkins
series, about a female vicar and diocesan
exorcist for the cathedral city of Hereford. The Watkins
stories combine supernatural and mystery elements, leading them to be classified variously as horror and crime fiction (though Rickman personally rejects the label of horror writer).

*The House of Susan
Lulham - Wikipedia*

In 2014 Oxfam published a book of short crime stories, Oxcrimes, which included "The House of Susan Lulham" by Phil Rickman. This featured Merrily Watkins, his much loved Vicar/diocesan deliverance consultant who has featured in a series of longer novels. But much was left unsaid in that story, and now Rickman has returned to it at greater length.

The House of Susan
Lulham is part of Phil Rickman's popular
Merrily Watkins series, but is not a full-length instalment - it's a novella (around 100ish pages), currently available as a rather beautiful little hardback
